

[illegible]

This Law made by King Edw. I. into m^o De no other Law than those contained in Regime Mayestatem. It may be farther noticed that King Edward I of England in the year 1304 appointed 19 Nobles to be his Justices. Of which 19 Nobles 12 were of the King's own Collections from 3 parts to 100. Whereas the King told our Regime mayestatem is an authentic original borrowed from and copied after by Robert Grossetest, Abbot of Evesham, folio 398.

These laws made by King Edw. 1. into many other laws than those contained in Regime Majestatem. It may be further noticed that King Edward 1 of England in the year 1304 appointed 19 Nobles to be his Justices. Of Robert 1st Prince of Wales 1st son of Edward 1st our Regime Majestatem is an authentic original borrowed from and copied after by Robert 1st of Genoa. It is now in the library of the University of Padua. pag. 398.

This Law made by King Edw. 1. into m. Do. no other Law than those contained in Regime. My. y. s. l. m. It may be further noticed that King Edward 1 of England in the year 1304 appointed 19 Nobles to be his Justices. Of which 19 Nobles 13 were of the King's own Nobles and 6 were of the Nobles of the Kingdom. This is an authentic original borrowed from and copied after by Robert Grant, Esq. in the year 1798.

These laws made by King Edw. 1. into many other laws than those contained in Regime Majestatem. It may be further noticed that King Edward 1 of England in the year 1304 appointed 19 Nobles to be his Justices. Of Robert 1st Prince of Wales 1st son of Edward 1st our Regime Majestatem is an authentic original borrowed from and copied after by Robert 1st of Genoa. It is now in the library of the University of Padua. pag. 398.

This Law made by King Edw. I. into m^o De no other Law than those contained in Regime Mayestatem. It may be farther noticed that King Edward I of England in the year 1304 appointed 19 Nobles to be his Justices. Of Robert, Prince of Wales, and 3 Justices. Whence his Majesty told our Regime. This Law is an authentic original borrowed from and copied after by Robert of Gloucestre, afterwards by Edward the First, and lastly by King Henry 3. pag. 398.