

Incessant upon the freedom of Parliament. When the Nobility turned the full Effects of Parliament, commissioners for printing the prints, and Commissioners for buying the third, Committee of each State alterable at pleasure were allowed to be chosen by their Respective Estates for preparing Motions and Petitions first made in the house without prejudice to the treating of Matters in plain parlour. In which Committee the offizess of State might be present to propose and debate with out Voting, and the Nobility might chuse such of their Thunbers as were officers of State to be of these Committees Act 3

Before this parliament proceeded to any publick affair, Controvorted Elections were first Determined.
No law could pass in that Session of Parliament where in it was first Read, but behaved to lie on the Table till Another Session that the Members might Consider thereof in the Mean time Act 10 pp. 6 Parl. H. W. Bills Approved and pass by Majority of Votes were of no force but presented to the King or his Commissioners, and touch'd by him with his Script or token of his Confirmation of them. Acts Voted in one Session of parliament might have been touch'd in another Session of the same Parliament without any New Vote: but acts voted in one Parliament could not pass into laws by getting the Royal assent in Another Parliament without being voted again whereas before on act by Parl. 6 J. 5. the Parliament had private Acts relating to Mens Rights and properties, any one might have protested for his Interest. And because such private Acts were made without hearing

ing or calling of those who might suffer prejudice there by, an Act Laws give ^{any} ~~any~~ subject ^{any} to be subjoined to the eral laws annul Rights granted to private persons without out calling them, which did not fall under the Act Laws Act 20 Parl. 17 S. 6. The ^{particular} ~~any~~ private Man's Right could not be declared null by the parliament without putting him, whom is obser. on d. Act 20. Again, the parliament might without biting parties discharge priviledges ~~given~~ Contained in the Rights of private men Act 10 & 11 Geo. 1 Parl.

S. i. The they could not without Citation and Annul private Rights, whom is obser. on d. Act 10. sometimes private Rights were excepted from that having an Act, which rendered d of no Effect as to them. But a Ratification in Parliament, with a Clause that it shoud not be liable to the General Act Laws first &c. cannot be insisted except in Parliament; for the the Ratification be private, and the Act Laws publick. Yet the Authority of parliament is the same, Stuart Answere to Sir Robert Doubts qd. Act Laws.
And the other Ratifications in Parliament pass of course, and do not give any New Right; yet they have many good Effects not only against the King who pretence of war willing the same is thereby extirpated, but also against the Laws, when no other person produceth better Right. It hath been Contraverted, whether two of the Estates of Parliament at the Major part can make laws without Consent of the third. It seems they can not: being otherwise two of the Estates might extirpate the third Craig. Lond. lib. 1 3 Parl. 17 lib. 2 afforts, that the parliament, being a collective body Composed of the King and three Estates whereof the Major part determineth the rest may make an Act without the Consent of any one of the three Estates. And the three
